SUMMER PROJECT

Frontend Web-d

This project is part of my Summer Training Project. The Project is based on front end web-development using HTML and CSS. In this project I have tried replicate webpage of a shopping website with obviously some changes of my own. This project was a great way for me to understand HTML and learn CSS from very basics.

Synopsis:

- The Project contains of a main webpage.
- The main webpage is then divided into three frames using `<iframe>` tag of HTML.
- The three frames are the top-bar the sidebar and the main category page. The main page also contains some of its own text and a bottom section with a table consisting appropriate links.
- Below this bottom section there is a banner entered using `<marquee>` tag.
- In this project HTML is used to design the basic Webpage while CSS is used to style it afterwards.
- Inline CSS is used at very few but appropriate places.
- Internal CSS is used at one of the webpages.
- External CSS is used for most of the webpages as it is easy to change the style of the webpage by changing just one file afterwards.

Main webpage

Taj jewellers

So, in this project I have tried to mimic the main jewellery page of an Online Shopping website 'MIRRAW' under the name 'Taj jewellers'.

The main concept of this project was to copy the website with some changes of our own and to understand how different elements are added inside the webpages nowadays.

Concept of top-bar

Taj jewellers

The top bar designing was a good concept that I learned during the project. Initially I created the last table of links the copyright bar at the bottom of webpage. As this was going to be in all the webpage it was quite a tedious task to copy paste both HTML and CSS elements in every new webpage. So, by creating this as a separate frame like done With top bar you just have to write one line of code in new HTML file the frame tag line and its all done.

The Track Order Link

Taj jewellers

So what is special about this track order bar? And why is it being discussed separately? The answer to these questions is that:

The Track order Page Is styled using Internal CSS. Hence you will see only one code for the whole webpage.

The styling is done using <style> tag.

Whereas in Inline CSS <style> attribute is used
